No residence is required, and the examination can be passed in three days. I would respectfully call your attention to what the University of Vermont does announce, and thus correct an impression which might be formed by your readers by the perusal of the above statement. We have, for many years, offered to graduates of other regular colleges the privilege of being examined in practice, surgery and obstetrics, and, if found qualified, of having the degree of M. D. conferred upon them by our institution. So far as I know, this is the practice of all university medical colleges in this country; some require an examination in all the branches, but none refusing to grant a diploma to graduates of other accredited colleges, who apply for the honor and satisfactorily fulfil the requirements of the case. The University of Vermont has included registered practitioners of England in the exercise of this privilege, and thus a physician in good standing, who has the title of F. R. C. S. or M. R. C. S. , can proceed to the degree of M. D. at this institution in the same manner as other regular graduates residing in this country. We require the candidate to appear in person, present a genuine diploma, prove his identity, present a certificate of character and of professional standing, and undergo a thorough examination in practice, surgery, and obstetrics. We announce that the examination can be passed in three days. In like manner a...
