Mr. Wright, however, maintains that these were extreme demands, which, if granted by the New Connexion, would revolutionize the whole system! Exaggeration is, however, employed by Mr. Wright in describing one of these demands. He says, the Association required-- . the immediate change of the name. The New Connexion was v.illing to change the name as soon as it could be done with safety. The Association required it to be done at once. No matter what the hazard--and legal gentlemen had attested the seriousness of the hazard--. it must be done without delay. p. 9. The italics are Mr. Wright s. Did not Mr. Wright intend to produce the impression, that the change of...
