Reviews

A whole new eBook with a brand new point of view. It is definitely simplistic but shocks in the 50 percent of the publication. I am just pleased to explain how this is the greatest ebook i have read during my very own daily life and could be he best ebook for possibly.

Excerpt: . . . 9 Fortunately, we also live in a time when there is an abundance of tools, technology, and messaging designed to keep the public in-formed of content and enable parents to control what their children are exposed to. TV shows now have a rating system that is prominently displayed during the show. Also, technology such as V chip are available through cable and satellite companies that allow par-ents to block certain shows that they may not want their children watching based on the shows rating. At the end of the day, no mat-ter how many tools are available to control content the responsibil-ity ultimately lies with the individual or the parent. I recognize that there is room for almost every interest in the market place, and diversity makes it easy to filter who is exposed to what. One of my favorite public service announcements was cre-ated by the Ad Council in conjunction with industry leaders and broadcasting cable satellite as well as other consumer electronics community. The commercial starts with a model who walks into her living room with a Soprano-like character sitting in front of her, and mom says, Remember last week when you hit Vinnie on the head with a shovel Well, it was pretty graphic, too graphic for my kids, so I am going to have to block you. The TVboss. org ad is a perfect example of how the system should work with the tools that are provided to parents. All the industries represented here today, and some that arent, have made great strides...
